While the new Barre Railroad engine "Monsieur" was running down from the hill at six o'clock last evening with a train of 17 cars heavily loaded with granite five of the cars in the middle part of the train jumped the track between the South Main street crossing and Hill street. The track was torn up for quite a distance by the derailment and it took nearly the whole night before the last car was pulled back onto the iron.

The train was so long the Hill street and Ayer street crossings were blocked by the cars but they were uncoupled and shunted back so that space was made for the passing of teams.
